Stratford-on-Avon is a prosperous market town of about 9,000 inhabitants. It draws perhaps ten times that number of pilgrims each year to the birthplace and the grave of Shakespeare. It is pleasantly situated on the River Avon, of which a charming view is given in the picture, including the old cruciform church of The Holy Trinity.

Stratford-on-Avon. Stratford-on-Avon is famous the world over as the birthplace of William Shakespeare, the great poet and dramatist. A large Gothic building, after designs by W. F. Unsworth, has been erected to his memory on the river banks. The building comprises a theatre, library, picture gallery and large central tower, from the summit of which a fine general view of the town is obtained.

We arrived here in time for lunch - the whole place swarms with trippers & is just the kind of place I do not like - every house pretty well is a tea shop or souvenir supply shop. awful - we have quite decided on continuing none on yet.
